PRETTY GIRL TO FACE GLARE FOR MURDER MYSTERY

Girl Professes Ignorance of Circumstances in Death
Of Employer

BELIEVED MURDER

Effectionate Note Signed
"Mary" Claimed Insig-
nificant by Girl

(By the Associated Press)
SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Nov. 26.—Miss Mary Watkins, approaching the witness stand at a coroner's inquest to be held here today, professed ignorance of the circumstances surrounding the death of her employer, R. S. Fee, Alhambra bank president, whose body was found yesterday by a searching party in the San Bernardino mountains near a cabin maintained by Miss Watkins.

Sheriff Shay believes the banker was murdered. Mr. Fee had been missing since last Saturday when he journeyed to the mountains with his wife.

At her home in Alhambra, Miss Watkins renewed her explanation that a suit of clothing identified as one worn by Mr. Fee by saying the garb had been given her some time ago by the banker for the purpose of providing Miking clothes for men guests whom she and her sister often entertained with camping parties.

The body of Mr. Fee was found 50 yards from the cabin occupied by Miss Watkins and half a mile from the cabin occupied by the Fees Saturday.

Miss Watkins said that an affectionate note signed "Mary" found near the body of the banker was without significance. Back of the banker's left ear was found a small skull fracture such as might have been caused by a blow from a sand bag or black jack.

Teacher Married Pupil.

(By the Associated Press)
CANBY, Oregon, Nov. 26.—The school board of Canby will meet this week to decide what to do about Rosamond Lee Shaw, 27-year-old high school teacher who on November 10 married Clifford Lefroy Sammelson, 17, a student in the high school and known as "the best boy in his class." The marriage took place at Vancouver, Washington, was kept secret until yesterday.

HIGH SCHOOL TO MEET ATOKA TEAM TOMORROW

The Ada high school football team expects to break its losing streak at Park field tomorrow afternoon when the Atoka high school gridsters invade the local quarters. Reports from the Atoka vicinity indicate that the invaders will come prepared to test the strength of the local team on the gridiron. While the Atoka team has not enjoyed a victorious season this year, their strength is not to be made light of and coach Cox has been working hard to prepare for the battle.

The Ada team will be in perfect condition for the fray tomorrow afternoon. None of the players suffer injuries that will keep them out of the fray and consequently Cox will send a fighting team into the conflict in the last game of the season.

The Ada team has suffered defeat at the hands of Henryetta, McAlester and Pauls Valley in order named this year. The Ada team was boomed for a victorious season but they ran into a snag at Henryetta and the jinx remained through the two following games.

High school officials expect a large attendance at the game tomorrow.

YELLOW DOG OUT FOR FRIDAY RUN

Day of Celebration to Mark
Annual Yellow Dog
Drive Here

Shriners of Ada plan to make Friday a holiday in Ada and are petitioning for a continuance of the Thanksgiving spirit for their annual Yellow Dog day.

The day will be one of merry-making while team captains are removing membership fees from people found on the streets of the city. The total sum collected from initiation fees will be turned into clothing for needy school children of Ada.

Shriners are expecting considerable rivalry among popular young ladies in the race for the manure set offered as a prize from the club for the lady receiving the most votes. The prize will be awarded at the Shrine dance to be held in the Pontotoc building.

Other plans for the day include a banquet for visiting and local Nobles in the Pontotoc building and the mystic and elevating Yellow Dog degrees initiation in the Pontotoc building. The dance will climax the day's hilarity.

A number of teams have been appointed to thoroughly canvass the town and round all curs into the local kennel for initiation into the honorable degree. Nobles and others working in the degree class maintain that force will be used if necessary to bring the candidate to due form.

Nobles from this section of the state have been invited to come to Ada for the day and to partake in the celebration. Local Shriners believe that a number of out-of-town Nobles will attend.

Union Thanksgiving Service to Be Held At Methodist Church

Ada people will render thanks for the blessings of the day, Thanksgiving, at a union service at the Methodist church. Rev. H. W. Wallace will bring the message. A fitting musical program will be rendered at the service according to plans for the program tomorrow night. A choir of voices from all churches will assist in the musical program while singers from the various churches will render selections.

The union Thanksgiving service has existed in Ada for a number of years and services have always been well attended. The absence of Rev. C. C. Morris and Rev. Charles Widney from the services will leave R. T. Blackburn, H. W. Wallace and E. O. Whitwell, pastors of the Methodist, Christian and Presbyterian churches to take charge of the program.

LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS COMBINE IN CRIME RAID

(By the Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Raiding forces combining the resources of states attorney, sheriff and police departments have begun what officers plan to be the most concentrated drive against criminals Chicago ever had known. Squads last night and early today visited all sections of the city and suburbs, closing suspicious places and arresting care takers. Owners of some resorts, the raiders reported, had already locked their doors and deserted the premises.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Opening statements were begun today in the trial of Col. Charles R. Forbes, former head of the Veterans Bureau, and J. W. Thompson, St. Louis and Chicago contractor, charged with defrauding the government on various hospital contracts.

NEW SAILLESS SHIP MAY MEAN SUCCESS TO AGES-OLD EFFORT TO HARNESS WIND POWER

By Jackson V. Jacobs

Central Press Correspondent
BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Man has speculated for ages on a method of harnessing and employing the force of the winds, just as he has tried to make the tides serve his ends, but so far the accomplishments in either direction have not proceeded beyond a sailing ship. This tremendously vast element has awaited its conqueror. Perhaps that lucky man is Anton Flettner, whose sailless sailingship has aroused world-wide curiosity.

This sailless-ship is not just a design on paper, it is an accomplished fact.

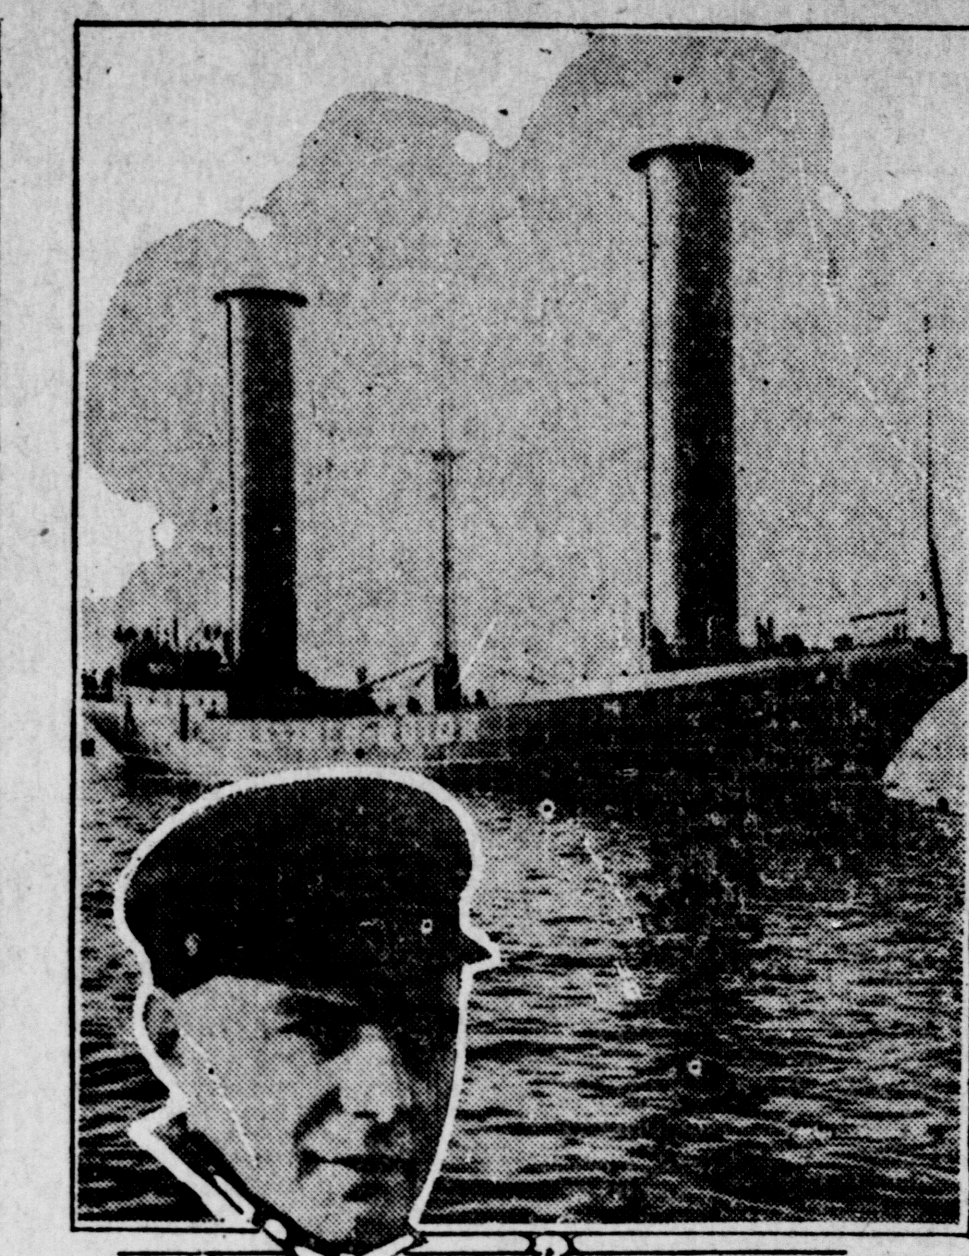

This ship is a 2,000-ton freighter made over with masts removed. Instead of masts, two steel cylinders three feet in circumference rise from the keel, through the deck, and stand some sixty-five feet in the air. The cylinders are set in motion by a small electric motor, and the ship moves off, propelled by the utilization of air currents. One man can operate the whole apparatus.

Details Kept a Secret.

How do the cylinders work? Here Flettner has kept that point to himself and to the group of men surrounding him. This group includes the Krups, who equipped his ship, and Hamburg-American Line officials interested in his patents. No explanation has yet been made of the method of catching enough power from the wind to drive the ship.

Scientific men point out that sixty five foot cylinder three feet around would offer little resistance to the wind, and therefore could not generate much power, according to all accepted principles.

But Flettner seems to have a new principle, or a new method based on an old one. He says that his plan is a development of the Magnus law, discovered in the middle of the last century by another German. This law—briefly stated—maintains that a cylinder revolving in a current of air will exert pressure at the right angles to the current. The Magnus law, however, has nothing to do with electricity. Flettner, it is suggested, may have hit upon a new means to store the energy derived from the wind by some other method than the generation of electrical power. If this is true, the influence of his discovery will extend much further than marine power. It would in all probability open a chapter in science equal to that which Benjamin Franklin introduced with his kite.

Has Established Reputation

It is said that plans are already under way to erect a 300-foot cylinder of the Flettner type in Berlin to generate electrical power.

Flettner says that his plan will reduce the cost of operating a ship by 80 percent. If so, he may be able to solve a problem that has seriously affected the commerce of the world. Ship operating costs never were higher than today, save at the peak of the war, and there is no nearer prospect of a reduction. This applies especially to American shipping, which is controlled by law in regard to American crews, the eight-hour day and such matters.

If a method has been found to reduce crews by something like two-thirds, at the same moment doing away with the cost of coal and the loss of space needed for storage, then ocean communication will indeed have entered upon a new period of its long evolution.

Flettner is not a newcomer in marine invention. He perfected a ruder some years ago that bears his name. He is now Director of Aerodynamic at the Institute of Amsterdam and is familiarly known to scientific men as an experimenter along original lines. His present affiliation with the Krups and the leading steamship interests of Germany has been accepted as evidence that his discovery is a matter of the first consequence.

Merchants Thankful for Prosperity

Merchants and others who go to make up the life of Ada as a city are thankful for the conditions of today that bring prosperity and contentment to homes, business and the city.

On the eve of Thanksgiving, Ada business men and leaders in civic affairs express a keen appreciation of the bounty of blessings enjoyed by them this year.

Following are the statements of thanksgiving of Ada people:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ROOMS TO HOLD COURT

The Chamber of Commerce rooms in the convention hall have been equipped for use next week of the federal court.

A stand for the judge, desk for the clerk and chairs for the jury have been put in place and a railing separates the space reserved for the court from that set aside for the spectators. Other rooms will be used by juries in their deliberations.

Court will convene for its first session Monday with Judge Kennamer on the bench. A fair sized dock et has been set for the term and will be taken up.

Ada was designated as a federal court town under a bill passed by the last session of congress sponsored by Tom D. McKeown.

"Kathleen" to Delay Appearance in City, Kiwanis Club Decides

"Kathleen" the Kiwanis club musical comedy will be presented December 10-11 instead of December 5 as has been previously announced.

The postponement of the dates of the presentation was necessitated because of the Thanksgiving holidays, which took a number of the cast to other points in the state.

Lax attendance at rehearsals have also resulted from the Thanksgiving holiday approach but those in charge feel that work will be started in earnest after the holiday is over.

The cast includes a number of college students who will be out of the city during the holidays.

The United States Bureau of Standards suggests the possibility of using X-rays to locate reinforcing rods in concrete when investigating standing structures.

What the Model Is Thankful For.
We are thankful for the prosperity that has come to our community. For the past three years the farmer has failed, and when the farmer fails, commerce must slump, for the products from the farm are the basis of all business. We are, indeed, thankful that again the products of the farm have been plentiful enough for business to regain some of its old snap.

We are also thankful for the increased confidence the people of Ada and the surrounding country are seeing fit to invest in our ability to pick what is right. It is enough to make even the most staid of business man thankful to know that his efforts in building up a business that the buyer can call "My Store" are being rewarded in such a way.

Indeed the Model has much to be thankful for.

"I am thankful that I am alive; that I am enjoying good health."—J. A. Smith.

"I am thankful this Thanksgiving season for friends in whose lives the life of Jesus is reflected."—Mrs. A. Linscheid.

"I am thankful that this year is an era of prosperity for every one. Business this year had been very gratifying and I am thankful that the people of Ada and vicinity have placed sufficient confidence in us to make business what it has been."—Winifred McLachlin.

"I am always thankful because I feel I get more than I deserve, and I believe the majority of folk should be thankful rather than complaining."—R. W. Simpson.

"I am thankful for good friends and neighbors, for pure water and an abundant supply of gas, for good business town and reasonable prosperous community."

"I would be even more thankful if we had a court house in Ada, a cotton factory and well improved roads throughout the country."—M. C. Wilson.

"I am thankful for a season of prosperity, which has been enjoyed by one and all, for the business town in which I live the good citizens I am surrounded by and the many blessings that are bestowed upon us every day."—Mrs. C. D. Price.

Shaw's Store Is Thankful That:
Irregularities in our importing business and an increase in exporting for the year 1924 reflect a general healthful condition throughout the country. Statistics show a third better condition than prevailed at this time a year ago, both nationally and locally. We are of the opinion that business will continue to improve, and for Oklahoma we expect the same satisfactory conditions, altered certainly, to continue with proper conservatism and firmness."—Langford Shaw.

"For life, health, peace of service, congenial friends. For all these I am sincerely thankful."—Rev. R. T. Blackburn.

BATTLESHIP WASHINGTON RESTS IN OCEAN GRAVE

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The hull of the uncompleted battleship Washington, proud promise of a great fighting craft, whose career was checked by the naval armament agreement, rests on the bed of the Atlantic off the Virginia capes today, conquered finally by the big guns of the battleship Texas.

After being used for a week for tests with depth charges to determine the resistance of her new structural design to external explosions, such as mines and torpedoes, the Washington was given her death blow yesterday by gun fire from the Texas. Word of her sinking, which virtually completes the ship scrapping program, was received by the navy department in a brief official report from Rear Admiral C. F. Hughes, president of the navy board which conducted the tests.

THREE YEGGS BLAST SAFE AT APPERSON POST OFFICE

APPERSON, Okla., Nov. 26.—Three yeggs shortly after 3 o'clock this morning completely wrecked a safe in the Apperson post office here but are believed to have been frightened away before obtaining any loot according to F. S. Nipper, postmaster, after he had made a preliminary check this morning. Several days may be required before a complete audit can be made, he said, as the nitro-glycerine blast shattered the contents of the safe all over the building. The post office was robbed of $600 in currency on September 25 when robbers worked the combination of the safe.

NO PAPER TOMORROW
Pursuant of this long standing custom, there will be no edition of the Ada News on the streets tomorrow, Thanksgiving. The News force will observe the holiday.

SOONERS TO COMPLETE DISASTROUS SEASON

(By the Associated Press)

NORMAN, Nov. 26.—The 1924 football team of the University of Oklahoma, after probably the most disastrous seasons in the history of the school, will make its final appearance tomorrow before a home crowd, in a game with the Kansas Agricultural college. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock.

For five of the regulars, Captain Bristow, Kendrick, White, Penich and Smoot, veterans of three years service, it will be their last appearance wearing the moleskins of Oklahoma. All are to be graduated in the spring.

Continued reversals have not disheartened the Sooners fans and there is belief that the team will reach a height of frenzy such as their experienced in the Nebraska game and defeat the Kansas Aggies.

Not since its entrance into Missouri valley conference circles, more than a decade ago, has a Sooner team finished as low in the race as this year's team. But one bright mark stands out on the Sooner record, that the 14-7 victory over Nebraska, a feat no other valley team has duplicated this year, nor for several years past.

The Kansas Aggies defeated the Sooners last year 21-20 and the year before the teams played to a tie, 7-7.

LEAGUE PONDERES OVER SUDAN NOTE

British Commissioner Claims
Less Tension Now in
Egyptian Centers

(By the Associated Press)

GENEVA, Nov. 26.—A telegram of protest against the British action in Egypt following the assassination of the Sirdar, Sir Lee Stack, was received today by the secretary of the League of Nations from the Egyptian parliament under signature of the president of that body.

The text indicated that a similar communication had been forwarded to all world parliaments. The telegram does not request intervention by the League but is confined to an exposition of the differences with England from the standpoint of the Egyptian parliament.

The League officials seem in doubt as to what to do with the communication, coming as it does from parliament and not from the Egyptian government.

Whether it shall distribute it officially to the members of the League which meets shortly in Rome has not yet been determined but officials expressed the opinion that the most likely course was that the document will be transmitted to all members of the League for their information.

KHARTUM, Sudan, Nov. 25.—The Egyptian units of Egyptian army have received an order to evacuate Sudan forthwith. The fourth battalion has left and the third battalion with artillery will leave shortly.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, British high commissioner in Egypt, informed the British government in a message today that the situation in Egypt is much easier as the result of the respite since the resignation of the Egyptian cabinet. The possibility of serious riots in Cairo and other cities he said was greatly reduced.

DOUBLE IDENTITY CLAIM OF ACCUSED MURDERER

(By the Associated Press)

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 26.—Robert M. Crofton, alias John Morgan, in jail here in default of bail on a charge of bigamy, denied he was the husband of Mrs. Frances O'Donnell Morgan of Philadelphia who caused his arrest. He said that he lived with the woman posing as his twin brother who, he declared, was Mrs. Morgan's husband.

He asserted that the twin brother was not killed in the war, as he had told police yesterday, but that he had left his family. Crofton was living with another woman when taken into custody.

In his statement the prisoner said he met his twin brother, whom he had not seen since he left home, in Nogales, Ariz., several years ago, on a street in Philadelphia early in 1923.

"My brother had taken the name of John Morgan," said the statement. "You go out to the house and I will see you in the morning," he said, "and so I went and when I rang the bell a child came to the door and called back to its mother, 'Here's Daddy.' It struck me as a good joke and I said nothing about it; I just walked into the house, made myself at home and my brother's wife never knew the difference."

YEATS ON TRIAL FOR MARRIAGE TO SINGER IN CHOIR

Counsel for Yeats Seeks to Introduce Letter in Court

MEETS OBJECTION

Father Tells of Intimacies of Former Pastor and His Daughter

(By the Associated Press)

NOWATA, Nov. 26.—Argument over the admission of a letter said to have been written by Joseph E. Yeats, former minister at Alluwe to Albert W. Fields, father of Georgia Fields, 15-year-old girl whom Yeats is charged with abducting, occupied most of the morning session of the Yeats trial in district court here today.

The letter was characterized by the defense counsel, who sought to present it in evidence as very beneficial to the case. R. T. Anglin, Nowata county attorney, who is prosecuting the former minister declared it was "irrelevant."

The contents of the letter were not revealed but argument of the defense attorney indicated it would throw a strong light on the motive of Yeats in eloping with the girl who had been a member of his choir at Alluwe.

Before the hearing settled down to legal argument over whether the letter should be admitted Fields had told of Yeats' association with his daughter while minister at Alluwe. Fields testified Yeats had taught his daughter to play the violin and that the lessons had thrown the two much together.

The girl with whom Yeats was apprehended in Texas late in September is 15 years old and regarded as one of the most attractive girls in Nowata county. She was 14 when the elopement took place, according to her parents. A jury for the case was chosen yesterday. A crowded court room offered a setting for the trial which is attracting more attention than any held here in years.

TIGERS ENTRAIN FOR FINAL GAME

East Central Off for Annual
Turkey Day Battle
At Durant

The Tigers are out of their cages at last for the annual feast on Savage meat—this year at Durant.

Coach Joe Milam, mentor of the College crew, boarded the rattlers before noon today for the trip to Durant where the annual East Central-Southeastern conflict will be held tomorrow afternoon.

This is the last game of the 1924 grid season and Coach Milam is hopeful for an even break in conference rating through victory over the Savages.

With the absence of Elkins from the Southeastern lineup and other casualties from injuries and the effect of the earthquake on the attack on Walter Wray still fresh in their minds, it is believed by dopesters that East Central stands its best chance of downing their ancient foes.

The East Central team has been defeated four times this season by conference teams in all games away from home while on the other hand the Tigers have carried off the honors in all games played here.

At the same time the College team is tangling with the Savages at Durant the high school team will be battling with the high school team from Atoka here.

The high school team suffered three consecutive defeats from Henryetta, McAlester and Pauls Valley.

Presbyterians and Methodists Behind Evangelist Meeting

The revival meetings to be conducted by Rev. Burke Culpepper in Ada, beginning January 4, will be a cooperative enterprise. The services will be conducted at the First Presbyterian church, and the Methodist and Presbyterian congregations are officially behind the movement. Other churches are expected to join in the series.

Rev. Culpepper is said to be one of the greatest revivalists in all the country, and those who have been instrumental in bringing him here believe they have secured the best for the time. The meetings will be evangelical but not denominational.

The Presbyterian church was selected in which to hold the services as its auditorium is larger than the auditorium of the Methodist church.

PRETTY GIRL TO FACE GLARE FOR MURDER MYSTERY

Girl Professes Ignorance of
Circumstances in Death
Of Employer

BELIEVED MURDER

Effectuate Note Signed
"Mary" Claimed Insig-
nificant by Girl

(By the Associated Press)
SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Nov. 26.—Miss Mary Watkins, approaching the witness stand at a coroner's inquest to be held here today, professed ignorance of the circumstances surrounding the death of her employer, R. S. Fee, Alhambra bank president, whose body was found yesterday by a searching party in the San Bernardino mountains near a cabin maintained by Miss Watkins.

Sheriff Shay believes the bank-or was murdered. Mr. Fee had been missing since last Saturday when he journeyed to the mountains with his wife.

At her home in Alhambra, Miss Watkins renewed her explanation
that a suit of clothing identified as one worn by Mr. Fee by saying the garb had been given her some time ago by the banker for the purpose of providing hiking clothes for men guests whom she and her sister
often entertained with camping parties.

The body of Mr. Fee was found 50 yards from the cabin occupied by Miss Watkins and half a mile from the cabin occupied by the Fees
Saturday.

Miss Watkins said that an affectionate note signed "Mary" found near the body of the banker was without significance. Back of the banker's left ear was found a small skull fracture such as might have been caused by a blow from a sand
bag or black jack.

HIGH SCHOOL TO MEET ATOKA TEAM TOMORROW

The Ada high school football team expects to break its losing streak at Park field tomorrow afternoon when the Atoka high school
gridsters invade the local quarters.
Reports from the Atoka vicinity
indicate that the invaders will come prepared to test the strength of the local team on the gridiron. While the Atoka team has not enjoyed a victorious season this year, their strength is not to be made light of
and coach Cox has been working hard to prepare for the battle.

The Ada team will be in perfect condition for the fray tomorrow afternoon. None of the players suffer injuries that will keep them
out of the fray and consequently Cox will send a fighting team into the conflict in the last game of the season.

The Ada team has suffered defeat at the hands of Henryetta, Mc-Alester and Pauls Valley in order named this year. The Ada team was boomed for a victorious season but they ran into a snag at Henryetta and the jinx remained through the two following games.

NEW SAILLESS SHIP MAY MEAN SUCCESS TO AGES-OLD EFFORT TO HARNESS WIND POWER

By Jackson V. Jacobs
Central Press Correspondent
BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Man has specu-lated for ages on a method of harnessing and employing the force of the winds, just as he has tried to make the tides serve his ends,
but so far the accomplishments in either direction have not proceeded beyond a sailing ship. This tremendously vast element has awaited its conqueror. Perhaps that lucky man is Anton Flettner, whose sailless
sailingship, has aroused world-wide curiosity.

This sailless-ship is not just a design on paper, it is an accomplished fact.

This ship is a 2,000-ton freighter made over with masts removed. Instead of masts, two steel cylinders
three feet in circumference rise
from the keel, through the deck,
and stand some sixty-five feet in the air. The cylinders are set in motion by a small electric motor, and the ship moves off, propelled by the utilization of air currents. One man can operate the whole apparatus.

Details Kept a Secret.

How do the cylinders work?
Here Flettner has kept that point
to himself and to the group of men surrounding him. This group includes the Krupps, who equipped his ship, and Hamburg-American Line
officials interested in his patents.
No explanation has yet been made of the method of catching enough
power from the wind to drive the ship.

Scientific men point out that sixty five foot cylinder three feet around would offer little resistance to the wind, and therefore could not generate much power, according to all accepted principles.

But Flettner seems to have a new principle, or a new method based on an old one. He says that his plan is a development of the Magnus law, discovered in the middle of the last century by another German.
This law—briefly stated—maintains that a cylinder revolving in a current of air will exert pressure at the right angles to the current.

The Magnus law, however, has nothing to do with electricity. Flettner, it is suggested, may have hit upon a new means to store the energy derived from the wind by some other method than the generation of electrical power. If this is true, the influence of his discovery will extend much further than marine power. It would in all probability open a chapter in science equal to that which Benjamin Franklin introduced with his kite.

Has Established Reputation
It is said that plans are already under way to erect a 300-foot cylinder of the Flettner type in Berlin
to generate electrical power.

Flettner says that his plan will reduce the cost of operating a ship
by 80 percent. If so, he may be able to solve a problem that has seriously affected the commerce of the world. Ship operating costs never were higher than today, save
at the peak of the war, and there is no nearly prospect of a reduction.
This applies especially to American shipping, which is controlled by law in regard to American crews,
the eight-hour day and such matters.

If a method has been found to reduce crews by something like two-thirds, at the same moment doing away with the cost of coal and the loss of space needed for storage,
then ocean communication will indeed have entered upon a new period of its long evolution.

Flettner is not a newcomer in marine invention. He perfected a rudder some years ago that bears his name. He is now Director of Aerodynamic at the Institute of Amsterdam and is familiarly known to scientific men as an experimenter
along original lines. His present ef-filiation with the Krupps and the leading steamship interests of Germany has been accepted as evidence that his discovery is a matter of the first consequence.

Merchants Thankful for Prosperity

Merchants and others who go to make up the life of Ada as a city are thankful for the conditions of today that bring prosperity and contentment to homes, business and the city.

On the eve of Thanksgiving, Ada
business men and leaders in civic affairs express a keen appreciation
of the bounty of blessings enjoyed by them this year.

Following are the statements of Thanksgiving of Ada people:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ROOMS TO HOLD COURT

The Chamber of Commerce rooms
in the convention hall have been equipped for use next week of the federal court.

A stand for the judge, desk for the clerk and chairs for the jury
have been put in place and a railing separates the space reserved for the court from that set aside for the spectators. Other rooms will be used by juries in their deliberations.

Court will convene for its first session Monday with Judge Kenna-
mer on the bench. A fair sized docket has been set for the term and will be taken up.

Ada was designated as a federal court town under a bill passed by the last session of congress sponsored by Tom D. McKeown.

"Kathleen" to Delay Appearance in City, Kiwanis Club Decides

"Kathleen," the Kiwanis club
musical comedy will be presented December 10-11 instead of December 5 as has been previously announced.

The postponement of the dates of the presentation was necessitated
because of the Thanksgiving holidays, which took a number of the cast to other points in the state.
Lax attendance at rehearsals
also resulted from the Thanksgiving holiday approach but those in charge feel that work will be started in earnest after the holiday is over.

The cast includes a number of college students who will be out of the city during the holidays.

The United States Bureau of Standards suggests the possibility of using X-rays to locate reinforcing rods
in concrete when investigating Standing structures.

What the Model is Thankful For.

We are thankful for the prosperity that has come to our community. For the past three years the farmer has failed, and when the farmer fails, commerce must slump,
for the products from the farm are the basis of all business. We are, indeed, thankful that again the products of the farm have been plentiful enough for business to regain
some of its old snap.

We are also thankful for the increased confidence the people of Ada and the surrounding country
are seeing fit to invest in our ability to pick what is right. It is enough to make even the most stal-
dard of business man thankful to know that his efforts in building up a business that the buyer can call
"My Store" are being rewarded in such a way.

Indeed the Model has much to be thankful for.

"I am thankful that I am alive,
that I am enjoying good health,"
J. A. Smith.

"I am thankful this Thanksgiving season for friends in whose lives the life of Jesus is reflected."
Mrs. A. Linscheid.

"I am thankful that this year is an era of prosperity for every one.
Business this year had been very gratifying and I am thankful that the people of Ada and vicinity have placed sufficient confidence in us
to make business what it has been."
Winifred McLachlin.

"I am always thankful because I feel I get more than I deserve,
and I believe the majority of folk
should be thankful rather than complaining."—R. W. Simpson.

"I am thankful for good friends and neighbors, for pure water and an abundant supply of gas, for good business town and reasonable prosperous community."

"I would be even more thankful
if we had a court house in Ada, a cotton factory and well improved
roads throughout the country."
M. C. Wilson.

"I am thankful for a season of prosperity, which has been enjoyed by one and all, for the business
town in which I live the good citizens I am surrounded by and the many blessings that are bestowed
upon us every day."—Mrs. C. D.
Price.

Shaw's Store is Thankful That:
Irregularities in our importing business and an increase in exporting for the year 1924 reflect a general healthful condition throughout the country. Statistics show a third better condition than prevailed at this time a year ago, both nationally and locally. We are of the opinion that business will continue to improve, and for Oklahoma

we expect the same satisfactory co-
ditions, altered certainly, to continue with proper conservatism and firmness."—Langford Shaw.

"For life, health, peace of service, congenial friends. For all these I am sincerely thankful."—
Rev. R. T. Blackburn.

BATTLESHIP WASHINGTON RESTS IN OCEAN GRAVE

(By the Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The hull of the uncompleted battleship
Washington, proud promise of a great fighting craft, whose career
was checked by the naval armament agreement, rests on the bed of the Atlantic off the Virginia capes today, conquered finally by the big guns of the battleship Texas.

After being used for a week for tests with depth charges to determine the resistance of her new structural design to external explosions, such as mines and torpedoes,
the Washington was given her death blow yesterday by gun fire
from the Texas. Word of her sinking, which virtually completes the ship scrapping program, was received by the navy department in a brief official report from Rear Admiral C. F. Hughes, president of the navy board which conducted the tests.

THREE YEGGS BLAST SAFE. AT APPERSON POST OFFICE

APPERSON, Okla., Nov. 26.—
Three yeggs shortly after 3 o'clock
this morning completely wrecked a safe in the Apperson post office
here but are believed to have been frightened away before obtaining any loot according to F. S. Nipper, postmaster, after he had made a preliminary check this morning. Several days may be required before a complete audit can be made, he said, as the nitro-glycerine blast
shattered the contents of the safe
all over the building. The post office was robbed of $600 in currency on September 25 when robbers worked
the combination of the safe.

NO PAPER TOMORROW

Pursuant of the long standing custom, there will be no edition of the Ada News on the streets
tomorrow, Thanksgiving.
The News force will observe the holiday.

SOONERS TO COMPLETE DISASTROUS SEASON

(By the Associated Press)

NORMAN, Nov. 26.—The 1924
football team of the University of Oklahoma, after probably the most disastrous seasons in the history of the school, will make its final appearance tomorrow before a home
crowd, in a game with the Kansas Agricultural college. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock.

For five of the regulars, Captain Bristow, Kendrick, White, Penich
and Smoot, veterans of three years service, it will be their last appearance wearing the moleskins of Oklahoma. All are to be graduated in the spring.

Continued reversals have not disheartened the Sooner fans and there is belief that the team will reach a height of frenzy such as their experienced in the Nebraska game and defeat the Kansas Aggies.

Not since its entrance into Missouri valley conference circles,
more than a decade ago, has a Sooner team finished as low in teh race as this year's team. But one bright mark stands out on the Sooner record, that the 14-7 victory
over Nebraska, a feat no other valley team has duplicated this year,
nor for several years past.

The Kansas Aggies defeated the Sooners last year 21-20 and the year before the teams played to a tie, 7-7.

LEAGUE PONDERES OVER SUDAN NOTE

British Commissioner Claims
Less Tension Now in
Egyptian Centers

(By the Associated Press)

GENEVA, Nov. 26.—A telegram
of protest against the British action
in Egypt following the assassination of the Sirdar, Sir Lee Stack, was received today by the secretary of the League of Nations from the Egyptian parliament under signature of the president of that body.

The text indicated that a similar communication had been forwarded to all world parliaments. The telegram does not request intervention by the League but is confined to an exposition of the differences with England from the standpoint of the Egyptian parliament.

The League officials seem in doubt as to what to do with the communication, coming as it does from parliament and not from the Egyptian government.

Whether it shall distribute it officially to the members of the League which meets shortly in Rome
has not yet been determined but officials expressed the opinion that the most likely course was that the document will be transmitted to all members of the League for their information.

KHARTUM, Sudan, Nov. 25.—
The Egyptian units of Egyptian
army have received an order to eva-cate Sudan forthwith. The fourth battalion has left and the third battalion with artillery will leave shortly.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, British high commissioner in Egypt, informed the British government in a message today that the situation in Egypt is much easier as the result of the response since the resignation of the Egyptian cabinet. The possibility of serious riots in Cairo and other cities he said was greatly reduced.

DOUBLE IDENTITY CLAIM OF ACCUSED MURDERER

(By the Associated Press)

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 26.—Robert M. Crofton, alias John Morgan, in jail here in default of bail on a charge of bigamy, denied he was the husband of Mrs. Frances O'Donnell Morgan of Philadelphia who caused his arrest. He said that he lived with the woman posing as his twin brother who, he declared, was Mrs.
Morgan's husband.

He asserted that the twin brother was not killed in the war, as he had told police yesterday, but that he had left his family. Crofton was living with another woman when taken into custody.

In his statement the prisoner said
he met his twin brother, whom he had not seen since he left home, in Nogales, Ariz., several years ago, on a street in Philadelphia early in 1923.

"My brother had taken the name
of John Morgan," said the statement. "You go out to the house and I will see you in the morning," he said, "and so I went and when I rang the bell a child came to the door and called back to its mother,
"Here's Daddy." It struck me as a good joke and I said nothing about it; I just walked into the house,
made myself at home and my brother's wife never knew the difference."

YEATS ON TRIAL FOR MARRIAGE TO SINGER IN CHOIR

Counsel for Yeats Seeks to Introduce Letter in Court

MEETS OBJECTION

Father Tells of Intimacies of Former Pastor and His Daughter

(By the Associated Press)

NOWATA, Nov. 26.—Argument
over the admission of a letter said
to have been written by Joseph E.
Yeats, former minister at Alluwe to Albert W. Fields, father of Georgia
Fields, 15-year-old girl whom Yeats
is charged with abducting, occupied most of the morning session of the Yeats trial in district court here
today.

The letter was characterized by the defense counsel, who sought to present it in evidence as very beneficial to the case. R. T. Anglin, Nowata county attorney, who is prosecuting the former minister declared
it was "irrelevant."

The contents of the letter were not revealed but argument of the defense attorney indicated it would throw a strong light on the motive
of Yeats in eloping with the girl
who had been a member of his choir at Alluwe.

Before the hearing settled down
to legal argument over whether the letter should be admitted Fields had told of Yeats' association with his daughter while minister at Alluwe. Fields testified Yeats had taught his daughter to play the violin and that the lessons had thrown
the two much together.

The girl with whom Yeats was apprehended in Texas late in September is 15 years old and regarded as one of the most attractive girls in Nowata county. She was 14
when the elopement took place, according to her parents. A jury for the case was chosen yesterday. A crowded court room offered a setting for the trial which is attracting more attention than any held here in years.

TIGERS ENTRAIN FOR FINAL GAME

East Central Off for Annual
Turkey Day Battle
At Durant

The Tigers are out of their cages
at last for the annual feast on Savage meat—this year at Durant.

Coach Joe Milam, mentor of the College crew, boarded the rattlers
before noon today for the trip to Durant where the annual East Central-Southeastern conflict will be held tomorrow afternoon.

This is the last game of the 1924
grid season and Coach Milam is hopeful for an even break in conference rating through victory over the Savages.

With the absence of Elkins from the Southeastern lineup and other casualties from injuries and the effect of the shakeup over the attack on Walter Wray still fresh in their minds, it is believed by dopesters
that East Central stands its best chance of downing their ancient foes.

The East Central team has been defeated four times this season by conference teams in all games away
from home while on the other hand
the Tigers have carried off the honors in all games played here.

At the same time the College
team is tangling with the Savages
at Durant the high school team will be battling with the high school
team from Atoka here.

The high school team suffered
three consecutive defeats from Henryetta, McAlester and Pauls Valley.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—The unaccustomed, mental, by shock, as a result of experiences during the World War, Renshaw makes a proposition to David Campbell, a wealthy, elderly man of leisure, that for a year he assume responsibility for him (Renshaw)—practically "buy" him. Doctor Stanley, life-long friend of Campbell's, indorses the proposition, which Campbell, with some natural misgivings, accepts. The arrangement is that the young man becomes an inmate of the Campbell household, with the nominal duty of secretary. Renshaw meets Verity, Campbell's granddaughter, and gets the impression that she does not like him. Jenks, the butler, Renshaw also feels, is distinctly hostile.

The visitor's glance dropped. "I suppose so," he duly conceded. "I realize how it must sound to anyone else. But Doctor Stanley understood, and he hoped you would. It is just a form of nerve obsession, you see, sir," he patiently repeated, "a fear of life and of the future. If I merely had a job I should live in a panic. Whereas, if I were actually bought for a year, I'd be off my own mind; don't you see?"

"And on mine," Campbell dryly commented. "Yes, I see."

Again the young man flushed. "It isn't as if I were useless," he muttered. "You will find that I can work like a horse. I'll do anything I'm told."

"Anything?" Campbell spoke with sudden meaning.

"Anything," the caller replied without hesitation.

The keen blue eyes of his host remained on his face.

"I see that you are at least in earnest," he conceded.

"It's a matter of life or death with me, Mr. Campbell."

Campbell hesitated.

"I might ask you to do some odd things," he hinted—"things you would not understand at first. The situation here just now is a trifle—ah—abnormal. And I might not be able to explain for a few weeks certain matters not clear to a newcomer."

"I rather expect that, from a remark or two that Doctor Stanley dropped."

"And you are sure the kind of responsibility that attends working for another—perhaps more or less in the dark—would not worry you?" the old man asked curiously.

"Not a bit. Top-see, someone else is responsible for me, and I am certain of a bed, a roof over my head, and enough food to fill my stomach. I am—his head dropped under the humiliation of the admission—"at the end of my resources."

"Your family—" Campbell began, after a moment's silence.

"So far as I know, I have not a relative in the world. But Doctor Stanley knows who my people were."

"Humph!" The word sounded ungracious; it was merely thoughtful.

"Doctor Stanley told me you really needed a secretary," Renshaw went on. "He thought there was no doubt you would give me a job, but he was not sure that you would buy me."

Campbell grimaced. "Oh, he wasn't—wasn't he? Confound him!"

The last words broke from his lips before he could check them. He tried to drown them in a cough, but the visitor heard. For the third time he flushed, this time deeply and unbecomingly. Simultaneously as if moved by a spring, he rose.

"Mr. Campbell," he said formally. "I hope you will forgive me for troubling you. I realize what an unpardonable nuisance I have been and how wild my scheme must have sounded to you. A doctor, of course, would understand. Very few laymen could."

STUDENT BODY GAINS IN METHODIST SCHOOLS

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—A total of 57,471 students are registered this fall in the 44 colleges and universities sponsored by the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal church, according to reports just compiled. This is an increase of about 96 percent in the enrollment for this group of schools since 1920. The total for that year was 29,250. The largest enrollment increase reported was 50 percent at Union College, Barbourville, Ky. Next in order were Evansville College, Evansville, Ind., 35 percent; Gooding College, Gooding, Idaho, 35 percent; McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., 32 percent; Iowa Wesleyan College, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, 30 percent; Oklahoma City College, Oklahoma City, 25 percent; Upper Iowa University, 17 percent; and Ohio Northern University, 13 percent.

The American University at Washington, D. C., a graduate school, has 165 graduate students representing 100 colleges and universities, or an advance of one-tenth over last year's figures.

In the case of Allegheny College, Dickinson College, Illinois Wesleyan, Lawrence College and Nebraska

I am grateful for the time you have given me, and I will not take any more of it. Good-night."

He held out his hand, and the somber veil on his face lifted a trifle. After all, this would settle things and he would not have to plan again.

"Wait a minute. Don't be in such a hurry!"

Campbell's voice was almost peevish. He struggled up from his chair, slowly and with much difficulty, till he stood facing his caller. He had liked this young man's valedictory.

"Wait a minute," he repeated, "in a different tone. Do I understand you to say that Stanley actually approves of this mad notion of yours?"

"Yes, sir. He thinks I would be very useful to you. He repeated that again and again. I think so, too," Renshaw sedately added.

"How much salary do you want? I mean—" Campbell corrected himself before the other could speak, but dropped his serious tone. "—what price are you asking for this—ah—purchase you suggested?"

"Anything you choose. Fix the price yourself, and pay it in monthly installments if you like, or at the end of the year."

Renshaw spoke indifferently, and the dark veil that had temporarily lifted from his face again settled there. So it wasn't over, after all, he was reflecting.

"Three hundred dollars, payable in twelve monthly installments of twenty-five dollars each."

Campbell watched him closely as he spoke, but the caller's expression did not change.

"Anything you choose," repeated the latter. "The only important detail is that you make yourself responsible for my support for a year—as absolutely responsible," he repeated, "as if I were your property."

"We will say twenty-four hundred dollars," the old man amended without explanation. "Will that do?"

"Yes, sir."

The voice and manner of the visitor were as unresponsive as before.

"When do you want to begin?"

"Now—this minute."

"Oh! Then you came prepared to stay?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well," Campbell held out his hand. "Now, if you have no deep-rooted objections to ten, we will drink some," he added as he slowly settled back into the big chair. "And I, for one, am ready for it! Buying a man, if you will permit me to say so, is rather an exhausting business."

He rang the bell as he spoke, and the complacent personality of the servant who had admitted Renshaw promptly injected itself into the room.

"Jenks," said his master, "bring tea, and tell Miss Campbell when it is here. And by the way, Jenks—" He stopped the man on his way to the door, and turned to Renshaw. "Did you bring any luggage?"

"A bag. It is in the hall."

Campbell spoke to the butler: "Take it up to the north room. Mr. Renshaw, who is my new secretary, will use that room—unless, after he has tried it, he prefers another."

Jenks left the room. He had not spoken, and he did not glance at Renshaw; but to the young man every line of his erect figure conveyed an august disapproval. In a few minutes he was back in stately association with a tea-tray, which he rolled up to the fire. Simultaneously the door from the hall reopened and a girl came in.

She was young, not much more than twenty-two, he decided, at a glance, and very lovely. Her hair and her eyes were darker than his own, but soft and holding an unexpected expression of melancholy. Yet every line of her face and figure showed pride and spirit, and she walked with the gait of a young empress. She came directly to the side of the old man, kissed the top of his head with precision, and turned her unsimiling eyes on the visitor as he was presented.

"Verity, my dear," Campbell was saying, "this is Mr. Renshaw, who is going to look after my correspondence, and see that I get to bed at ten, and rule me generally with a rod of iron. But I warn you, Renshaw, that my granddaughter will hardly tolerate another tyrant in the house. To order me about is her pet privilege."

Renshaw, bowing silently before the girl, met for an instant the direct regard of her proud eyes, and in that instant realized that she did not like him. He accepted the discovery with indifference. The liking or disliking of others was unimportant. But, as he took the cup of tea she poured for him, he unexpectedly met the gaze of another pair of eyes—and the expression of these he could not so casually dismiss from his mind. They were the eyes of Jenks, the butler, and they held a message that was as clear as it was unpleasant—a message of intense and open antagonism.

While Campbell chatted with his granddaughter, tossing an occasional sentence to his new property, John Renshaw stared into the tea he was absentmindedly stirring. In his normal past many human beings liked him, and a few had disliked him. But as far as he knew none had repudiated him, at the first encounter so warmly and so obviously as Miss Verity Campbell and her butler had just done.

Why had they repudiated him?

Chapter II

Along Comes Verity.

"Mr. Renshaw!"

Tea was over and Jenks, again imperturbable, had trundled away the tea-tray as tenderly as if it held the family's heir. As it was going, Campbell struggled out of his deep chair and, standing with his straight old back to the fire, addressed his new property with stave directness. Renshaw shied like a frightened horse, and none of the three pairs of eyes watching him missed the movement. Campbell experienced a sense of revolt, shot through with irritation against his old friend and physician.

"Confound it, how can this fellow be of any use to me, when he's nervous as a cat?" he reflected. "It's going to be an infernal nuisance to have to consider him as if he were a high-strung prima donna."

But, even as the thought went through his mind, the new secretary had recovered his poise and was on his feet, obviously ready for instructions.

"Probably you would like to go up to your room now," Campbell went on, in the stave voice that was so much younger than his years. "To unpack and rest after your journey. Jenks will show you the way. We dine at eight," he added, as the young man followed the butler, who had stopped at the sound of his name.

When the door closed upon the two, Campbell drew a long breath of relief.

"My dear," he fervently ejaculated, "I am beginning to think it will be almost worth while to have that fellow around for the sake of the frequent rapture of getting rid of him."

Verity's black eyebrows rose a trifle. "Why did you engage him, if you didn't want him?" she asked.

"Stanley wished him on me. The whole episode is an amazing piece of folly, and I am afraid I don't show up in it any better than Stanley and Renshaw," her grandfather confessed, with growing irritation. He described his interview with Renshaw, while Verity's expression, incredulous at first, changed to one of deepening interest and perplexity.

"You don't imagine there is something back of it?" she slowly suggested. "An effort to get into the house and—"

"No, no!" her grandfather testily interrupted. "The last two years of the man's time are fully accounted for. He has been in sanatoriums, poor chap. Besides, Stanley knows all about him."

"I wonder what happened to him?" Verity spoke almost under her breath, her imagination circling among various dark possibilities of which she had heard and read.

The old man shook his head. "I haven't an idea. What I want to know is, what's going to happen to me under this absurd arrangement? I can't imagine why I let myself in for it. For a second or two I thought I saw a way of making him useful, but I don't believe it will work out—" He broke off. "I suppose the fellow has some magnetism," he ended.

"Not a particle," Verity spoke with conviction. "In fact, it's the other way around. There's something almost repellent in him, something a little—oh, what is the word? Well, something unhuman. He is unusually handsome, of course; there's even a certain nobility about his head and face. And yet, he's like a ghost. Yes, that's what I am trying to get at," she added, with quiet satisfaction. "He looks at us as the dead might look if they came back—as if he had passed through existences and experiences we could never understand and could not even dream of."

"No doubt he has," the old man conceded. "He affects me like a human draft. But we must hot let our imaginations run away with us. If he is too depressing, we will get rid of him; I'll ship him off and make him useful somewhere else. He's got to do what I tell him and go where I send him." And now let's forget the fellow and go on with that book you were reading."

Upstairs, in the chamber to which Campbell had sent him, Renshaw was doing some thinking of his own. His first impression was that it was oddly remote from other rooms. Only one additional door opened from the narrow corridor he had traversed. The second reflection, as Jenks turned a knob and stood back to let him enter his new quarters, was that the room was very large and extremely comfortable. Jenks touched an electric button and the shadowy room flashed into soft light which brought out the details of a mahogany bed in a far corner, facing the door, a high-boy, a low-boy, and a large built-in wardrobe. The room's north wall contained two windows, and through two additional windows, very wide and with built-in cushioned seats, he could look out on the front grounds of Tawno Kor and follow the mapled avenue leading to the highway. He was to have plenty of light and air, he reflected with content.

He went to a north window and, glancing out, found this first impression changing. There would be air, without doubt. But numerous oaks and maples crowded close to the house—so close, indeed, that an athlete such as Renshaw had once been could leap from a window into the wide-spreading branches of at least one venerable tree. The trees were rather unexpectedly thick in front, too, he discovered, and he was surprisingly far from the ground. He would be almost among the tree-tops if he leaned far out of the windows on the front side of his room.

Jenks threw open the door of a second room in which could be seen the outline of a shower apparatus and the nickel and porcelain fittings of a bathtub.

"The bathroom is very small, sir," the man apologetically explained, "and there's no window in it. It was made two years ago, out of a big closet. But you will be quite comfortable. And you will always find extra linen in the closet just outside your door, in the corridor. That closet is the mate to this one."

Renshaw returned to the bedroom and its blazing fire. He found that Wesleyan, either restrictions of the freshman class, raised tuition, or a higher entrance requirement, kept the enrollment the same or slightly smaller. The larger schools, such as Northwestern, Syracuse, the University of Southern California, have as many students as they can handle.

German Meat Eaters Now Demand Fancy Cuts

BERLIN.—It pays German cattle breeders today to fatten their cattle, something that has not been true since the war. Fat cattle on the hoof bring up to 30 cents a pound, and hogs as high as 37 cents.

During the inflation period few farmers cared to bother about fattening their livestock, partly because the price of feed was so high and because the German people were so happy at having anything to eat at all they did not lay much emphasis upon especially choice cuts.

With the return of stable conditions there has come a demand for choice meats, and fatted farmers are giving much time and thought to the feeding of cattle.

Jenks had lifted the heavy traveling cage to a small trunk-stand and was unfastening the straps.

"I'll attend to that, thanks," he said with a gesture of dismissal.

"Very well, sir," Jenks turned to go. "Shall I come back at half-past seven and help you dress?"

"No, thanks; I'll get along," Jenks hesitated.

"Excuse me, sir, but Mr. Campbell regards it as a part of my duty to assist any gentlemen guests of his—and I shall be very glad to do anything I can, sir."

"That's all right, but I'm not a gentleman guest. I'm here to stay, and I prefer to look out for myself. So I won't trouble you."

Renshaw spoke pleasantly, but he was feeling puzzled. Standing by the fireplace with his elbow on the mantel and his detached glance drifting past the man's face, he wondered, without much interest, why the creature was so suddenly friendly. An hour ago he had been furiously resentful of the newcomer's presence. Now he seemed all eagerness and deference.

"Are you planning to have breakfast up here, sir?" he respectfully inquired.

"Good Lord, no!"

Renshaw spoke with sudden irritation. "Why the devil was the fellow so persistent? Was it merely because he realized that the open betrayal of his antagonism had been unwise? Or was it—the thought stood solidly at the entrance of the secretary's mind until he finally permitted the unwelcome visitor to enter—was it because Jenks knew that this newcomer was so infernally dependent on others that even at this moment every instinct in him was calling for assistance?"

"What's your name?"

"Jenks, sir."

"Well, Jenks, there's exactly one thing you can do."

"Yes, sir." The man's tone was eager.

"Get out, please, and be quick about it."

Jenks got out. His surface dignity was unimpaired, but the door closed on his exit with a temperamental snap.

Left alone, Renshaw dropped into the easy-chair before the exuberantly blazing fire, and rested his head against its padded back with a sigh of exhaustion. He was tired—tired to the soul; but from the darkness of that soul the hermit-thrush of hope sent out a solitary note. He had put through the Plan. He had won that little contest of wits with Jenks, and had given no outward sign of the effort it cost him. Now he would rest. Of course he ought to be unpacking, bathing, dressing for dinner. He would do all these things later. His present duty was to relax—to let the atmosphere of the old house sink into him.

AGRICULTURAL CENSUS TO BE STARTED SOON

TULSA, Nov. 26.—An agricultural census to include every farm in Oklahoma, as well as in the nation, will begin on December 1, according to officials of the United States department of agriculture. Plans for the census have been under way for several months.

The work of taking the census will end January 31, 1925.

Data showing the value of all used and unused farm lands in the country, the value of all crops, the value of farm machinery and buildings and the cost per acre in producing staples will be sought.

One question that will be asked will determine what percent of American farms have radio receiving sets in farm homes.

The census, undertaken by the department of agriculture every five years, is in no way connected with the population census taken every ten years and all information obtained will be held from the public as far as individual reports are concerned. Data gathered may not be used in assessing taxes, the department has stated.

Questionnaires have been mailed to every farm known to the department. These questionnaires contain groups of questions to be answered in writing and delivered to the census taker when he calls at the farm. The questions cover every phase of agricultural activity. When the census is complete the department will have accurate information on the amount of land under cultivation, the amount of land suitable for cultivation but unused, the acreage of waste land, the amount of live stock and poultry in the country and the value of various crops. Other questions will determine the number of tenant farmers and the number of farm owners. Persons engaged in agricultural industries will be classified according to race, age and sex.

"This census will be a revelation," an agricultural statistician here said. "The last census, taken immediately after the war was made under abnormal conditions."

RECORD ENTRY IN LIVE STOCK SHOW

U. S. Department of Agriculture to Award Medals

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Under a special act of congress, official medals to all winners of first prizes and championships in the live stock classes will be awarded by the U. S. Department of Agriculture at the 25th anniversary of the International Live Stock Exposition, to be held here November 25-December 6. President Coolidge has accepted an invitation to attend the opening, according to an announcement by B. H. Heide, general manager.

Entries in virtually every department have established new records this year. A total of more than 11,000 animals probably will be entered in the nearly 900 separate contests, Mr. Heide said.

Thirty of the principal agricultural organizations of the country will hold their annual sessions in connection with the exposition, which annually attracts many of the leaders in this industry.

Three Scotch, one Argentine and three Canadian judges will assist the best talent in this country in making the awards. Among the first livestock entries to be received were four Shorthorn cattle from the Prince of Wales' ranch in Canada.

The dry weather of October so improved the quality of the corn and small grains that superintendent G. I. Christie anticipates the finest display of seeds and hay ever assembled in the grain and hay show, another feature of the exhibition. Fourteen agricultural colleges and experiment stations have reserved space for educational exhibits.

The Third National Boys' and Girls' Club congress will be held during the international in its permanent headquarters on the show grounds. Eleven hundred champion judges have been awarded free trips to the show as a reward for excelling in their various club projects.

The horse show will occupy the arena each evening at which the leading light horses of the country will perform in addition to a varied program containing new entertainment features.

BIG YIELDS ON FIVE ACRE COTTON TRACTS

ARDMORE.—Reports in the five-acre cotton yield contest are due at the office of the county agent, and immediately upon receipt of them, Link Putman will begin tabulating figures so that the judges might do their work.

Some of the first reports show that an average of about a bale an acre is being made by the contestants this year. This is better than the average yield for the state in normal times.

Thirty-eight farmers have entered the contest for prizes amounting to $1,000. Twenty-five prizes offered, ranging from $25 up.

Information taken from these reports will be incorporated in the annual report of the county agent this year, and Mr. Putman is intending to make this one of the features of his report.

PALESTINE WOULD SOLVE CONFUSING LAND TITLES

JERUSALEM.—A complete real estate survey is the latest reform to be introduced in the Holy Land by the British administration, which announces the engagement of an expert who was lately advisor to the Egyptian ministry of finance and previously inspector of the survey department of that country. This expert will advise the government on the completion of the land survey of Palestine, and on the best method of undertaking a land settlement.

The agricultural progress of Palestine is greatly hampered by the existence of many disputed land titles and undetermined boundaries, as well as by other defects in the land system inherited from the Turkish regime. Because of disputed titles Zionist institutions, and individual Jewish colonists are still experiencing difficulties in purchasing land. Even after the completion of a transaction, the right of the owner to sell is frequently questioned by squatters who claim ownership of the land they cultivate, with resulting delay in throwing open large areas for intensive cultivation.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A SONG OF THANKSGIVING:—Oh that men would praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men! O come let us sing unto the Lord; let us come before His presence with thanksgiving. For He is our God, and are the people of His pasture.—Psalm 107: 25; 95; 1, 2, 7.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Certainly the nation, state and county have ample cause for feeling thankful this year. Trade, labor and agricultural conditions have been the best for several years and prosperity reigns again.

Oklahoma has prospered as she has seldom done before. With bountiful wheat and cotton crops, to say nothing of other crops, and these commanding fair prices, the farmers have been relieved of a terrible strain by the money brought in from the outside to pay for the farm products, all other lines have felt the stimulation and Oklahoma can look forward with stronger hope than ever.

Pontotoc county has shared the general wave of prosperity. Not only has the best cotton crop in years been raised and marketed at a reasonable price, but a fair amount of feed was produced and this will relieve the farmers of much borrowing in making the next crop. The citizens in both the rural districts and the towns have gone through some strenuous times during the past four years and can again see their way out.

It is indeed fitting that day be set aside on which to return thanks to the Creator for the blessings which are bestowed in course of a year.

The most difficult thing about conducting a publication or commercial printing plant in a penitentiary is that editors and printers are so hard to find within the walls. No doubt some people—politicians in particular—would like to see more of them behind the bars, but they seldom land there. Recently a prison publication issued by the Minnesota penitentiary had to make a contract with outside firms to print it since there was not a printer within the walls. Some years ago a governor of Oklahoma was going to establish a big printing plant in the penitentiary at McAlester to do the state's printing, but it speedily developed that he could not get a force from among the convicts and had to give up the idea. Are editors and printers better than they are given credit for being, or are they just a little too smooth to be caught? We express no opinion in the matter.

The arrest of Koretz, the alleged confidence man who after fleeing his relatives and friends to the tune of several millions, fled from Chicago a year ago, calls to mind the fact that the long arm of the law can reach quite a distance. Koretz with a large amount of his loot to keep him in comfort, probably thought he was settled for life, but as is usual with crooks, missed his calculations. He has a large account to settle with Uncle Sam and the state of Illinois, so the prospect is that instead of a comfortable old age made possible by his thefts, he will spend a number of years in the penitentiary. Koretz probably thought he was smoother than most crooks and could get away with it but has had ample reason to change his mind since being run to earth.

"Man kills self over love," reads a headline in an exchange. "Another fool gone" would have described it fully as well. In a case of that sort a girl may thank her stars that she did not tie up with a man with so little brains. If there are any love lorn swains around here who are contemplating suicide because of their hearts being broken we would advise them to wait awhile. Remember that the sea still contains as good fish as were ever caught and that some of the fish are not very particular about the bait, either. Generally a heart broken by a disappointment of this kind soon heals over and the guy is ready to offer it to some other girl.

A writer for the New York Times, who happened to be born at El Paso, Texas, when that city was 700 miles from the nearest railroad, ridicules the bad man and two gun men of the romancers as well as the noble red man of the type depicted by Cooper, having spent most of his youth keeping out of reach of the scalping knife. He has no great amount of admiration for any of these screen heroes, but why should he attempt to tear away the illusion? People want their characters that way and the man who would destroy their faith in the reality would tell a small kid there is no Santa Claus.

It looks like the trade balance in favor of the United States may reach the billion dollar mark this year. During the first 10 months of the year it totalled $675,000,000. Since the beginning of the world war in 1914 the excess of exports over imports has been around $22,000,000. This has made the United States the great creditor nation of the earth. Prior to the war it required the entire trade balance and then some to keep even with Europe. European capitalists owned so many bonds and other investments in this country that the interest payments required some good round sums annually.

THE POOR LITTLE RICH BOY

STATE FAILS TO END BREAD PRICES IN PARIS

PARIS.—Meat consumption in France has increased three fold since the war; French livestock is insufficient to meet the demand, and the general public has manifested a dislike for frozen meat. Such are the facts that have been brought out by the investigation ordered by the government in its campaign to bring down the cost of living.

Hence an increase in the importation of live animals is recommended, and 60,000 sheep will come to France from the River Plate, in South America.

The report of the investigators calls for cheaper fertilizers and agricultural machinery to encourage the sowing of wheat, and recommends that the number of French steam fishing vessels be increased.

Meanwhile a two-pound loaf of bread sells in Paris today at a higher price than any time since the war of 1870.

Varied Attack on Ship.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Secretary Wilbur disclosed in a formal statement today that torpedoes, aerial bombs and gun fire had all been employed in tests made off the Virginia capes on the hull of the uncompleted battleship Washington sent to the bottom yesterday. The final tests were made by gun fire.

Volcanic steam now furnishes power in Florence, Italy and neighboring towns. This steam from the interior of the earth contains small amounts of boric acid and considerable quantities of ammonium carbonate, which are recovered.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND NEVER SUSPECT IT

Application for Insurance Often Rejected

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

THE LIBERTY CAFE

We Are Thankful—

—for the good business we have enjoyed during the year; for the better conditions all over the county that have made this improvement in business possible.
—for the community in which we live; for the good friends we have on every hand. For after all, one's friends are his richest blessings—his dearest treasures.
—for the interest and co-operation of the sales force of our store. To them goes the fullest measure of credit and appreciation for the successes of the year.

Constipation breeds 40 diseases

What a wreck of the human body constipation can make. It floods the system with dangerous poisons. It leads to serious diseases. Don't neglect it!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, cooked and krumbled, if eaten regularly, is guaranteed to relieve permanently the most chronic cases of constipation. If it fails, your grocer will return your money. Kellogg's is ALL BRAN. Doctors recommend it. They know that only ALL BRAN can bring 100 per cent results.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN stimulates the intestine in nature's own wonderful way. It sweeps, cleans and purifies! It makes the bowels function naturally—and regularly.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has a delicious, nut-like flavor. Eat it with milk or cream—or in the recipes given on every package. Eat two table-spoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. All grocers.

GIRL ALMOST FORGOT SHE WAS HEIR TO FORTUNE

(By the Associated Press)
BERKELEY, Calif., Nov. 26.—When Randolph Banning, wealthy San Francisco and Honolulu resident died a year ago, he left one-quarter of his million dollar estate to his niece Ida Eleanor Weaver, University of California student. It was announced here today.
When questioned about it, Miss Weaver said she had been so interested in her studies that she had "almost forgot about it." Miss Weaver, who is a pre-medical student, said she was looking forward to founding a hospital after her graduation.

A Doll With Three Heads

Changes Faces, Changes Clothes, Walks and Talks

Many Dolls in One—Heaps of Fun

A doll with one body—but three to a dozen heads! And a different costume for each head! Heads and costume changed in a jiffy—each change making an entirely different character—that's the Famlee Doll.

Heads screw on and off—simply a turn at the neck; a two-year-old can do it.

Great fun to change from a Girl Doll to a Boy Doll—then to Little-Miss-from-Holland—then to Ching-Chong-Chinaman—and so on through all the lovable and life-like characters in each set.

Never before a doll like this—an ever-changing playmate that multiplies the fun of every play-hour.

Each character walks and talks, 16 inches high. Non-breakable. Quality in every detail.

In attractively boxed sets—each with one, body and three, five, seven or twelve interchangeable heads, with a special dress or costume for each head. Additional heads and costumes to add to the family can be bought at any time.

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving! That delightful day for the young folks as they hover about the kitchen door and eagerly sniff the spicy odors wafted therefrom. Thanksgiving! That friendly day for the older folks gathered from near and far, at family reunion as they regale each other with tales of the long ago. Thanksgiving! Most of all, that thankful day when all America from coast to coast communes in spirit, giving thanks as did that little band of Pilgrims centuries ago, for the Hand that guided us through the years to ever increasing prosperity and success.

THANKFUL FOR OUR FRIENDS

A bank without friends is like a car without gasoline, or a ship without fuel

Friends are the greatest possession an individual or an institution can have. Without them neither can prosper.

We are thankful for the many friends the officers of this bank number among their acquaintances, as well as the friends of the institution itself.

We are thankful that so many of our old friends have come back to us, and we hope to be of service to them for many years to come.

Business is built on mutual helpfulness. Mutual helpfulness depends upon mutual trust and friendship.

While there are many things this entire section should be thankful for this season, again we want to say that we are Thankful Most of All for Our Friends.

OUR THIRD ANNUAL CHRISTMAS Subscription Offer

*Begins Today and Lasts
Until Midnight December 31st*

ONE YEAR - - $4.00

If you have been paying by the month, you will save $2 by paying for a year now.

If you have been paying by the year in advance, you will save $1 by paying now.

Don't neglect the matter but come to the office before you forget it and get the matter settled for another year.

Send the paper to a friend. You can thus render a distinct service to your friend and boost Ada at the same time.

The year 1925 is to be an important one in the history of Ada and this section. Oil development, industrial expansion, road building, and other improvements are to take on greater activity, if the present tendency is any correct indication.

The Ada Evening News is constantly making improvements in the service. For a city the size of Ada it is carrying more local news, more state and world news and more features than any other newspaper we know of.

Conditions of Christmas Offer: Your subscription must be paid to December 1 or later. If you are paid up to November 15, you can pay 50 cents to December 15 and then $4.00 will pay you to December 15, 1925.

Don't wait for a solicitor to see you. Solicitors will be working, but they might miss you. Come to the office or mail check, using the coupon at the bottom.

Mrs. L. Abrams

Mrs. L. Abrams, 324 E. Logan St., Guthrie, Okla., is a living testimonial to the astonishing health-building powers of Andre's great new treatment, Karnak.

"I just feel too happy to keep silent about it," says Mrs. Abrams. "I suffered so dreadfully from stomach trouble during the past eighteen years that it seems almost like a miracle to be able to sit down and enjoy a good hearty meal again without having cramping pains in my stomach afterwards."

"Karnak just seems to have toned up my whole system, for I am no longer troubled with a sluggish liver, constipation, dizzy attacks or sharp, shooting pains in my back that used to keep me feeling miserable all the time."

Karnak is sold in Ada exclusively at Gwin & Mays and in Stonewall at Chas. Burnett's.—Adv.

STOCKHOLM.—Nothing short of an American jury can compare with the newly elected personnel of the Second Chamber of the Swedish Riksdag for variety of occupation and social status. The list of members contains more than 90 different titles to describe the pursuits and positions of the 230 persons constituting the full membership.

The Social-Democrats gained enough strength to dictate a new cabinet headed by the veteran statesman Hjalmar Branting, who has twice before been Social-Democrat premier of Sweden. Among his cabinet members are P. V. Thorsson, minister of finance, who rose from a shoemaker's apprentice to his present place at the king's council table. Per Albin Hansson began his career as a grocer's boy and is now minister of defence.

But the stories of obscure beginnings are no more fascinating than a perusal of the titles by which the present members of the second chamber describe themselves. They show blacksmiths and iron workers side by side with admirals and university professors. Farm hands, shoe makers and stone masons rub elbows and noblemen governors, army officers of high rank, prominent lawyers and judges. No less than 72 describe themselves as proprietors of farms. The list contains 20 editors, 11 teachers and professors, nine carpenters and cabinet makers, four locomotive engineers and firemen and several other railroad employees.

Other occupations selected at random from the list are as follows: mechanic, chaplain, baker, miller, glass blower, clergyman, physician, marcellan, dairyman, gardener, mail carrier and accountant. Of the three women members, one is a trained nurse, one a photographer and one sets herself down as "wife." There is one baron, one count and several other noblemen of Sweden's bluest blood.

SPEED TENDENCY JUMPS BRITISH ROAD ACCIDENTS

LONDON.—Motor cars in England have not yet become so common that they kill as many people each year as does influenza, which statistics show to be the case nowadays in America, but the toll of life on the highways is becoming a matter of concern over here, too.

In the past 12 months road accidents increased in number by 26 percent over the previous year. Sir Henry P. Maybury, director-general of the roads in the Ministry of Transport, told a recent meeting of motor manufacturers, that he has been impressed with the growing tendency to increased speeds by all manner of vehicles.

High speed driving is more dangerous in England than in almost any other country with good roads, for the country highways seldom keep to a straight line for any considerable distance. It is doubtful if they ever will, unless automobiles become considerably more numerous and new roads are demanded. One of the charms of England is her winding narrow roads, lined with hedges, and few want to see them given up merely for the sake of getting from place to place in less time.

You'd hate to live in a town without gas. Every try a coal furnace and carry out ashes?

If you'd tell the gas man now and then how much you enjoy the days when the service is good—and that's practically every day in Ada—you'd make his job lots easier.

Gas is probably Ada's greatest natural resource. We should know more about the organizations who furnish it to us, and show our appreciation of the convenience they make possible.

The Story of the Turkey

Contrary to general belief, roast turkey, with giblet gravy and cranberries, has become the standard Thanksgiving piece de resistance in comparatively recent years. Once New England rejected it at the Thanksgiving dinner table.

The story that turkey was the mainstay of the Thanksgiving Day dinner of the early colonists of New England seems to have come from the pen of a visiting Englishman at Plymouth, who described his travels in a book published in London just after the great fire.

He also told the absurd story of the starving condition of the Pilgrims and their being reduced at one time to a dinner of three grains of corn. The fact was that none of the early or late colonists could have starved at Plymouth or elsewhere along the north or the south shore, as the sea teemed with fish and shellfish and the woods were alive with game.

What They Preferred

What the Pilgrims and the Puritans craved for in the early years of the settlement was roast beef and mutton, pork, wheat, oatmeal and barley bread, venison pasties made from the red deer stock native of England; jams and jellies from English fruits preserved with brown sugar from the Orient and English mead, ale and Holland spirits.

Most of them disliked Indian corn in all forms of products for human consumption, and they disliked oysters, clams, lobsters, mussels, scallops, turkeys and native

Cotton Root Rot.
STILLWATER, Okla.—If fields of cotton infected with Texas root rot are to be rid of the disease, farmers must break up and harrow out all stalks of this year's crop as early as possible, plow the ground at least five inches deep and plant the fields to oats or some cereal crop next spring.

That is the report of Prof. Fred M. Rolfs, head of the department of botany and plant pathology at Oklahoma A. and M. college. Professor Rolfs has just completed a study of the root rot, which he says in the last year did eight million dollars damage to Oklahoma cotton crops. It is most active in southeastern Oklahoma.

Root rot has been regarded as of considerable economic importance in Texas for the last forty years, says Professor Rolfs, and it is his opinion that it spread into Oklahoma from that state. Its origin is unknown, but there are indications that it is a native disease of weeds in Texas. It is thought likely that it is transferred from weeds to cotton.

In addition to cotton and weeds the disease is equally as destructive to sweet potatoes, alfalfa, sweet clover, okra and fruit trees, the professor says. Cereal crops, however, are immune from its attacks.

In describing symptoms of the disease, Professor Rolfs says that they differ but little on most hosts.

"Infected cotton plants at first seldom show evidence of the disease, but later they wilt suddenly and the entire foliage droops and dies. In three or four days, the leaves shrivel, blacken and in most cases, fall off, leaving a dead stalk which assumes a reddish brown color," he says.

"The tap root of all dead plants is invariably dead and shriveled and the bark usually slips off the wood on the lower end of the root when the plants are pulled up. The smaller rootlets also are dead and readily are broken off. Usually several large lateral roots develop on the stem just below the surface of the ground. Apparently these lateral roots are the last of the root system to be consumed.

"The disease spreads from plant to plant so that the number of dead plants gradually increases as the season advances, and in old cotton fields many spots of reddish brown dead plants appear. These spots finally unite, forming large, irregular areas of dead plants and in some cases as high as 80 to 90 per cent of the plants in a field are killed by the end of the season.

"Wet weather increases the spread of the disease, but dry weather tends to check its progress," he continues.

Areas attacked by the root rot depend largely upon spacing of cotton rows. In fields where wide spacing is the practice, the root system of the plants develops on all sides, gradually interlacing with other roots. Finally the entire field becomes a net work of interlacing roots and when an infection occurs, the disease spreads in all directions from the point of infection, he says. Under such conditions, the infected area naturally assumes a circular form.

Where narrow spacing is the practice, the crowded condition of the roots enables the disease to pass more readily from plant to plant along the row, and the infected area is less uniform in outline.

Business in England Only 3 Percent Under 1913 Figures
(By the Associated Press)
LONDON.—Great Britain is today earning much more money than of late years, and in 1923 its income from productive power, and services rendered to the outside world, totalled around $17,350,000,000 or $400 per annum for every man, woman and child in the country. This represents an increase of $1,650,000,000 on the 1922 figures says the Economist.

It is calculated that British business in 1923 was working at 95 percent of its 1913 capacity, against 86 percent in 1922, and only 80 percent in 1921.

BERLIN.—Freight traffic on the German government owned railways increased 12 percent in September as compared with the business of August, it was announced recently by the railroad administration. The increased traffic is due partly to the fall shipments of agricultural products, but is also attributable to a marked improvement of the economical situation in general.
